Woman Gets Tariff Post

Washington, July 13 (AP)—

President Johnson has named a top woman economist and expert in international trade, now in the Central Intelligence Agency, to fill a vacancy on the U. S. Tariff Commission. She is Dr. Penelope Hartland Thunberg, a 1965 winner of the Federal Woman's Award for outstanding government career service. Her $20,000-a-year post has been vacant since the term of Walter Schreiber expired in June last year.

Johnson, announcing his selection at a news conference, called on Mrs. Thunberg to take a bow before his nationwide television audience.
